STRAND. In a busy Wall street banking office Dave Martin, the chief teller, claimed Adele, private secretary to Frederic Vibart, office manager, as his bride. The happy couple combined their len-eymoon with his vacation. Dave had aved considerable money and they regis-tered at a sumptuous notel at one of New York's fashionable resorts.

Life was a beautiful symphony to the lovers until a knock came at the foor. An officer had a warrant for Dave's arrest. The bank had discovered that $50,000 for which Dave had signed before he started on his trip was missing. In his bag was found the wrapper that was around the money.
